The National Rehabilitation Hospital (NRH) in Dun Laoghaire is the national tertiary referral centre for Ireland providing complex specialist rehabilitation services to adult and paediatric patients from all parts of Ireland in a range of CARF-accredited in-patient, out-patient and community programmes. The NRH is a voluntary hospital that is fully publicly funded and operates on the ethos of providing high quality care and treatment to patients based on clinical need, irrespective of background or status. The NRH receives medical students from all three Dublin medical schools (UCD, TCD and RCSI).

The NRH is undergoing a major transformation of its facilities and services. Phase 1 of the redevelopment project received patients in June 2020 and provides a unique, purpose-built facility that includes 120 single ensuite rooms with integrated therapy, clinical and social spaces.
